Pozole

MARKET AND TRAILER ONLY

Our family's original White Pozole recipe, from Mexico City, made with pork, chicken, or vegan jackfruit. Hominy simmered low in broth, served hot in a cup at the market or a bowl at home, and finished by you at the table, not by us. Red style is built on guajillo chiles, Green on tomatillos and serrano peppers. Every order gets the same topping spread: cabbage, radishes, onions, jalapenos, cilantro, oregano, red pepper flakes, limes, and avocado, so the heat and the crunch are entirely up to you.

Hot and assembled fresh at the market or trailer, this version can't be delivered or picked up cold. For a frozen quart to take home, see Take Home Pozole.

Take Home Pozole

DELIVERY OR PICKUP

The same family recipe as the hot version, sealed in a prepackaged 32oz container and frozen for delivery or pickup, ready to reheat at home. Pork, chicken, or vegan, in White, Red, or Green. Toppings are included in every order, packed in their own separate to-go containers so nothing gets soggy in transit, cabbage, radishes, onions, jalapenos, cilantro, oregano, red pepper flakes, limes, and avocado. This is not the same product as the retail pouches sold in grocery stores, this is made to order and shipped directly.

The only item the commissary can fulfill. $40 minimum, $10 delivery fee (San Diego County).

Pozole Burrito

MARKET AND TRAILER ONLY

All the toppings and the broth's flavor, wrapped in a flour tortilla so you can eat it walking through the market instead of sitting down with a spoon. Salsa comes on the side rather than mixed in, so it stays a burrito and not a soup by the time you get to it. We left this one without an invented name on purpose, since no natural Poz-word fit the way Poztada or Poznachos did.

No commissary path. Left without an invented Poz-name on purpose, since no natural word fit (MyPozole_Claude_Design_Build_Brief.md section 2).

Poztada

MARKET AND TRAILER ONLY

Pozole ladled over crisp tostada shells instead of served in broth, so you get crunch in every bite instead of soup. Cabbage, radish, and lime on top, the same way you'd dress a real tostada, just built on our hominy and protein instead of the usual fillings.

No commissary path, market and trailer only.

Poznachos

MARKET AND TRAILER ONLY

Tortilla chips on the bottom of the cup, pozole and toppings piled on top, so the chips start softening the second it's in your hands. Built to be eaten fast and messy, this is the one that doesn't wait for you.

No commissary path, market and trailer only.

Pozfrito

MARKET AND TRAILER ONLY

Fritos on the bottom and more on top, our answer to the walking taco, except it's a fork you'll want instead of a bag to eat out of. The corn crunch holds up surprisingly well against the broth for the first few minutes, which is most of the appeal.

No commissary path, market and trailer only.

Pozole Varieties

Pork — the traditional recipe, slow cooked 8 hours. Chicken — white and dark meat, slow cooked 8 hours, a slightly leaner option. Vegan (Jackfruit) — slow cooked in a vegetable base broth, plant based.

Every Pozole style (White, Red, Green) is available in all three proteins.

Toppings, added by you at the table

Shredded cabbage, chopped radishes, chopped onions, chopped jalapeños, cilantro, crushed tostadas, oregano, red pepper flakes, fresh squeezed lime juice, and avocado (available at an additional cost).
